

Three ontological turnings

Three ontological turnings - lecture by Martin Holbraad

Three ontological turnings, Martin Holbraad [1]

Useful information Date of publication: 25-01-2016

Source: Youtube [2]

Recorded at: Seminarium IEiAK UW

Place: IEiAK UW

Date: 02-12-2015

Lecturer's name: Martin Holbraad

The purpose of this talk is to clarify some of the basic premises of the so-called 'ontological turn' in recent anthropological theory. Presenting briefly two examples of ethnographic analysis that demonstrate some of the basic characteristics of this approach, I suggest that the ontological turn must be understood as a strictly methodological proposal, and above all as a technique of anthropological description. Thus understood, the ontological turn involves deepening and radicalizing three features that have always been present in mainstream anthropological research, namely reflexivity, conceptualization and experimentation.

Martin Holbraad is Professor of Social Anthropology at UCL. His main field research is in Cuba, where he focuses on Afro-Cuban religions and revolutionary politics. He is the author of Truth in Motion: The Recursive Anthropology of Cuban Divination (Chicago, 2012), co-editor of Thinking Through Things: Theorising Artefacts Ethnographically (Routledge, 2007) and Framing Cosmologies: The Anthropology of Worlds (Manchester, 2014), and co-author of The Ontological Turn: An Anthropological Exposition (Cambridge, 2016). At present he directs a 5-year ERC-funded research project on the anthropology of revolutionary politics.

Source URL: <https://etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/multimedia/three-ontological-turnings>

Links

[1] <https://etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/file/three-ontological-turnings-martin-holbraad>

[2] https://youtu.be/c-SQBe-V7Jw?list=PLVi6w9hRT7I7SMqqjKEfB_qxGKec-fkQs