

Hydroperformativity and the mirage of hydro-power

Hydroperformativity and the mirage of hydro-power: How water speaks

Małgorzata Owczarska

•

– [1]

Publisher: SAGE Publications [2]

Year of publication: 2026

Book/ journal title: Environment and Planning D: Society and Space, online 27.02.2026

Original Language: English

Abstract

This article asks how water speaks and relates to Central European people, especially those who have experienced displacement, totalitarianism, droughts, or floods. Based on ethnographic research conducted within the framework of blue anthropology, it focuses on Pilchowice, a postindustrial village in Poland, introduces concepts such as hydroperformativity, water worlds, and water as a transsubstance, and challenges the mirage of hydro-power formed in human–water relations since the nineteenth century. It illustrates how such illusions lead to paradoxes, unconventional industrial landscapes, and eerie practices of dwelling degradation. Water in this context actively cocreates hydrosocial realities that consistently evade control and transcend time, allowing us to reflect on human dreams of prosperity and today's water permacrisis.

Keywords

Hydroperformativity, water worlds, blue anthropology, hydrosocial relations, environmental humanities, transsubstance, floods, droughts, water crises, hydro-power

Source URL: https://etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/publications/hydroperformativity-and-mirage-hydro-power?field_filtr_publikacji_value=All&page=3

Links

[1] <https://etnologia.uw.edu.pl/en/publications/hydroperformativity-and-mirage-hydro-power>

[2] <http://doi.org/10.1177/02637758261426808>